

Mayor

Gary Wregglesworth was first elected to the Onaway City Commission in 1987, serving until 1989 when he resigned for personal and work commitment reasons. While this decision best served his family, he felt he had not yet fulfilled his commitment to those that elected him.

In 1997, as the City began looking into the construction of a sanitary sewer system, Gary decided to again run for a seat on Onaway's governing body, believing such a system was vital if the community was to experience any growth or development.

Gary was elected in 1997 to a two-year seat on the commission. In 1999, he was elected mayor, believing that he might be voted out of office due to the difficulties involved with building the sewer system but also believing that doing so was too important to give up on.

The sewer was completed in 2006, and Gary is presently beginning his sixth three-year term as mayor. He said he continues to serve because the community has continued to support what he believes is a great team of progressive-minded commissioners and staff.

Gary credits that team with important projects including not only the sewer system, but the restoration of the Onaway Courthouse, the overhaul of the downtown streetscape, major water system improvements, and multiple upgrades to city properties and equipment.

He says he now feels he has honored his commitment to the voters who elected him.

Gary and his wife Ellen have been married 25 years and have three grown children. He has been employed in the security department at the Walter and Mae Reuther Family Education Center for 26 years.

Gary also is employed part-time as a paramedic with Onaway Area Ambulance. He is a lifelong resident of the Onaway area and has resided in the City for 30 years.
